ST. PAUL, Minnesota. Feb. 14, 2019 _When politicians promise to fully fund public education in Minnesota, what does it really mean for students and the state budget?

Education Minnesota will provide answers during a news conference Friday afternoon at the state Capitol.

The union of the state's educators will present its cost estimate for fully funding public education and give examples of how infusions of new money have benefited students in the past. Classroom educators will also describe the consequences of underfunding.

Who: Education Minnesota President Denise Specht and Minnesota educators

What: News conference on the costs and benefits of fully funding public schools

When: 3-3:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 15

Where: Press conference room, State Capitol, B971
